Mr. Van Buskirk, the manager, is an old real estate man, with four years' experience in Kansas Gay and twelve in Denver, and is as well peated on reality and its value as any man in the business.

Speaking of creeting a fusiness block, Mr. Van Bushirk says: "Judging from my own experience in securing an office, we could let every room before the building was half completed," and he agrees with careful, conservative buyers and real estate men that Salt Lake has a great future before her and is undoubtedly the place to invest in property.

A Section of the City That is Bound to Become a Fashlomable Residence Quarter at No Distant Date.

In looking over Salt Lake and its environments the most desirable spot on which to build the future capitol of the state of Utah was found on the commanding eminence now known as the capitol ground.

In every state in the union where the capitol building is situated away from the intrusion of business it becomes the centre of respectability and social prowess. The building with its stately character dignifies its surroundings with an air of superiority. The streets that surround the Capitol grounds are surely to become the fashloushie center of this city. The cast benches are tame and common place beside the grounds that look down the State read.
